Turner Hears Greenbelt Issues, Discusses Zoning and More

by Amy S. Hansen

County Councilmember Todd Turner touched on county zoning rewrite concerns, the FBI headquarters and other issues during his listening session held in the Municipal Building on March 15.

The meeting, attended by about a dozen people including five city councilmembers, started with Turner highlighting developments in the county including the opening of the new Wayne Curry county administration building in Largo, as well as the MGM Casino in National Harbor.

Concerning the ongoing zoning rewrite, Turner introduced Project Manager Chad Williams who works for the Prince George's County Park and Planning Commission. The zoning rewrite, the first one in 51 years, has been underway since 2014 and Williams' group is nearing the completion of their part of it. He hopes to have the 220-page report to the county council by the end of the month. The proposal will then go through the legislative process, taking a minimum of 18 months with more opportunities for public interaction.

Turner acknowledged that many of the people in the room were ready to speak to the zoning. "The elephant in the room, at least for Greenbelt, is the RPC [Residential Planned Community] and neighborhood conservation overlay zone," he said, asking Williams to address that issue directly.

An RPC zone overlay basically leaves the zones as they were so the new zoning code will not affect them.

Williams said the commission See TURNER, page 6

ERHS Step Teams Carry On Tradition of Excellence

by Caroline Hanks

The Eleanor Roosevelt High School Step Teams

Members of the Eleanor Roosevelt High School step squads work hard to carry on their teams traditions of success and commitment. At the 2017 Youth Step USA National Championships, the squads for both boys and girls, known as Dem Raider Boyz (DRB) and The Lady Raiders respectively, claimed the top spots.

Both squads recently won their regional competitions that qualified them for the Youth Step USA national championship, which will be held on May 26 in Newark, N.J.

Stepping is a dance tradition that has grown from song and dance rituals practiced by African American fraternities and sororities starting in the early 20th century. The dance form has produced competitions on local, regional and national levels on college campuses and at schools, churches and community organizations, according to the website for Step Afrika!, the first professional international step-dance company.

DRB step squad was founded on September 21, 2001. A founding member of the squad, Richard Melvern, now coaches the DRB, a position he started after graduating from ERHS in 2003 while he attended the University of Maryland. He said he believes his role as the squad's coach is not confined to teaching members how to step or creating the choreographed routines for competitions.

"I work hard to instill discipline, respect, a great work ethic and a desire to strive for excellence in everything that they do," Melvern says. "Their success off the stage is just as important to me as their success on the stage."

The squad's first-place finish was the second consecutive time and third time in its history DRB has won the Youth Step USA national title. This past year, the members of The Lady Raiders Step Squad joined their brother

Old Greenbelt Theatre Managers Describe Successes, Challenges

by Melissa Sites

Old Greenbelt Theatre has become a destination for visitors from around the area, encouraging nonresidents to spend their money not only at the theater but also at other businesses here in Greenbelt, according to Caitlin McGrath, executive director of the theater. McGrath, along with members of the Friends of Greenbelt Theatre (FOGT) board of directors led by its Chair and Treasurer Cathy Jones, presented a funding and revenue analysis to city council during a March 14 worksession.

According to McGrath's report, the City of Greenbelt's $50,000 investment draws 40,000 people to Roosevelt Center annually. Agreeing with McGrath's findings, Mayor Emmett Jordan responded, "The theater is one of the economic drivers for Roosevelt Center, and it is a gem."

The Old Greenbelt Theatre has operated as a community-based nonprofit, under the direction of FOGT, since spring 2015. The theater has shown impressive growth in programming and membership since the group took over operations shortly after the renovation in 2014-2015. Councilmember Leta Mach declared that the city's financial support has paid off, saying "The best economic development we've ever done in Roosevelt Center is

by Kathleen Gallagher

At its March 12 regular meeting, city council voted to authorize engaging the services of a firm to conduct a national search for the city's next chief of police. Chief James Craze retired in October 2016 with 45 years of service to the city and more than 50 in law enforcement. At that time, former City Manager Michael McLaughlin appointed Deputy Chief Thomas Kemp as interim chief of police, who himself has served more than 30 years in the Greenbelt Police Department.

Up to $30,000 was budgeted for the search. In December 2017 the city advertised a Request for Qualifications for police chief recruitment services and three firms responded, with estimates in the $22,000 to $30,000 range. The city manager, assistant city manager and director of human resources reviewed the responses and selected Springsted Waters

Executive Recruitment firm of St. Paul, Minn., as their first choice.

A strong factor in the decision was that this firm was recently employed locally for police chief searches by Rockville and Takoma Park, and these cities provided positive recommendations. Not only is Springsted Waters familiar with the local market, but Greenbelt will be able to benefit from

Women Benefit Too

Regarding the article titled Safe Haven Churches Offer Shelter, Food to Homeless, I couldn't help but notice some misinformation within the article.

It says in the article: "The other shelter, Warm Nights, is for families only," when referring to the categories of homeless being served.

I used to work for Warm Nights as a shelter manager. Warm Nights is funded by the county and is handled by Community Crisis Services, Inc. Warm Nights provides shelter for men, women and families so homeless women are able to benefit from these services.

Daylight Saving Time: What Benefits?

I am in third grade and since daylight saving just happened, we had to do a daylight saving worksheet. The last thing you had to do was choose between three options, one of which was a letter to the editor. So I thought, why not write a real letter to the editor?

My feelings on daylight saving are that it's silly. There are some benefits of daylight saving, like getting to play longer after school. But daylight saving also makes me a little more sleepy when I have to get up. Other than that, it's just changing a clock. I don't think there is any point in changing what we made. One day in March is the same as the next as far as the Earth's rotation, even if 9:00 is 8:00.

Zoning Rewrite

A newsletter was recently delivered to GHI members containing an article regarding zoning and how it affects GHI.

I would like to offer a correction to one item in the article. It states "Because GHI is near a public transportation node (Greenbelt Metro station) and has immediate access to regional roadways, it is at risk of being included in a new zone with higher density." This statement is incorrect. Under the proposed zoning rewrite all properties currently zoned Residential Townhouse (RT), such as GHI, will be mapped to a new zone closest in density, character and purpose to the existing zone. This proposed mapping is not related to the proximity of a Metro Station.

Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning staff anticipates the RT zone will be mapped to a Residential, Single-Family – Attached (R-SFA) zone under the zoning rewrite. While the current RT zone allows for six townhouse dwelling units per acre, the R-SFA zone will allow for up to 16.33 townhouse dwelling units per acre. This will result in significant up-zoning of GHI property as well as other townhouse properties throughout the county. This up-zoning may make GHI and other townhouse properties more attractive to prospective developers for redevelopment.

On a personal note, I disagree with the statement in the article that it is premature at the moment for GHI members (and by extension Greenbelt residents) to reach out to elected officials regarding the zoning rewrite. I think it is imperative for those interested in protecting Old Greenbelt to reach out to our elected officials now and to let them know we need a cap in density (dwelling units per acre) included in the new zoning ordinance. The proposed new zoning ordinance will be introduced as legislation shortly. Contact Dannielle Glaros, chair (dmglaros@co.pg.md.us) and Todd M. Turner, vice chair (District4@co.pg.md.us) of the county council and request that a footnote be included in the text of the new zoning legislation which caps residential density, at existing levels, in Greenbelt's National Historic Landmark District. This will ensure old Greenbelt is protected from increased density until such time as a community-based Greenbelt Neighborhood Conservation Overlay Zone (NCOZ) is developed and adopted that includes such a density cap. Now is the time to speak up before the county council adopts the new ordinance.

Poetry in Protest

My 9-year-old son John wrote a haiku this week and he said today that he wants me to submit it as a letter to the editor. He says that it is about the maglev that has been proposed between Baltimore and Washington to be built through Greenbelt.

what you are trying to build,
so stop it people.

More Murals, Please

I enjoyed reading about the mural coming to Greenbelt Elementary School in last week's paper. Kudos to those who were involved in bringing life to the project over the past year. I look forward to seeing the finished masterpiece in a few months. It is clear that this project is having a positive impact on both the students and local community.

Why has it taken so long for a public mural to come to Greenbelt? I could be mistaken, but I can't think of any other public murals in our city. For such an artistic community, Greenbelt is lacking in public displays of art. We all know the Mother and Child statue that stands proudly in the center of old Greenbelt, and there are a few other statues around the Community Center. But there are no murals, despite the short-term and long-term benefits they bring to a community. As someone who grew up in Greenbelt, and moved back as an adult, it strikes me as a void in this town that could be easily filled by seeking and embracing more public art displays like the one coming to GES.

According to research published in several professional art journals, there are many advantages to public murals. A community reaps the most benefit when its residents are involved in the design, creation and installation or painting of the mural. These displays of art engage the community by bringing together different demographics and invoke a sense of pride in one's surroundings. Murals can provoke discussion or exploration of issues such as environmental concerns

Dunham Addresses Astronomical Society

Dr. Joan Dunham, retired Goddard scientist, will be the featured speaker at the Thursday, March 29 meeting of the Astronomical Society of Greenbelt.

Dunham’s topic is The Ashen Light of Venus. The 2015 occultation of Venus offered a unique opportunity to attempt observation of the ashen light of Venus as the planet’s unlit side emerged from behind the dark side of the Moon. The dark side of Venus would be offered to observers without interference from the bright side of Venus or of the Moon. Observations were made from Alice Springs, Australia, visually with a 20-cm Schmidt-Cassegrain and with a low-light level surveillance camera on a 25-cm reflector. The talk discusses the data collected and results from the analysis of those data.

Dunham worked for many years at Goddard Space Flight Center primarily on spacecraft orbits. She retired as the Flight Dynamics Facility Operations Manager in 2012. She was also briefly employed at the U.S. Naval Observatory. She has been an enthusiastic observer of occultations by the Moon, planets and asteroids for many years.

The meeting will be at 7:30 p.m. in Room 114 of the Community Center. All are welcome. There is no admission fee.

Snow Days Further Shorten Spring Break

The 2017-18 school year has lost more than two days to bad weather. Governor Hogan’s mandate for a post-Labor Day start date with school ending June 15 means that the only way to meet the state requirement of 180 days of instruction is to shorten the spring break. April 6 was originally scheduled as the last day of spring break and will now be a school day. Other snow days, including March 21, may take away another day of the spring break.

ERHS Postpones One Act Plays

Due to weather concerns, the Eleanor Roosevelt High School Drama Department postponed its One Act Play Festival, originally scheduled for March 20 to 22, to after spring break (tentatively April 10, 11 and 12). Tickets that were purchased for the March performances will be honored on the corresponding day of the festival that week.

or social justice. In the case of the GES mural, it will integrate art and science while promoting environmental education and appreciation. Murals can also give voice to oppressed groups or redefine common values. There is an invisible harmony in bringing people together in the creation of community murals. Once complete, murals become magnets, drawing viewers and striking up social interaction.

Murals can also be seen as a bridge that connects Greenbelt's history with its present community. Public art was a big part of the culture during the New Deal era. According to the Smithsonian, there were thousands of federally funded public art projects in the mid-1930s as part of the work-relief programs implemented under President Roosevelt. This initiative aimed to make art accessible to Americans in public gathering places such as post offices and schools. New Deal murals centered on the American culture and displayed images of ordinary people in their daily routines, trying to make ends meet.

Greenbelt is an evolving community and one way to embrace this diversity is through public art that engages and unifies the local residents. I can think of several "blank canvases" in Greenbelt. Can you?

Illegal Hunting

The other day while I was walking through the woods, I came across two boys (9 or 10 years old) who were darting and stealth-running along the Canyon Creek bed. They had their air popper and dart guns poised. I naively thought they were playing a game akin to the now politically incorrect "cowboys and Indians" of my youth. However, they were not. They were hunting raccoons.

They excitedly told me that they had shot one "back there" and had one cornered in a cave in the undercut bank of the stream. I tried to discourage their rampage. I asked them questions about the value of life and talked about the ecosystem in the woods. When I realized that appeals for mercy would not dampen their lark, I mentioned the potential for rabies. Finally, I hinted that I had photographed them and would show their pictures to the police. (I had not photographed them). No one is allowed to hunt in the Greenbelt or GHI woods. With that threat they abandoned the raccoon and ran.

I went on down the trail and found a dead raccoon. When I was talking with the boys, I thought they meant that they were shooting at another raccoon, but now I believe they killed it. I backtracked and found that the boys had returned to bombard their trapped raccoon. When they saw me returning, they ran off again. I kept watch for a while: I am now concerned that the 'fake' or imitation weapons (even the low tech variety) could kill and certainly maim small animals at close range.

I walk through the woods frequently and have never witnessed another incident like this. I hope it is an anomaly, though I suspect it is not a unique event. I encourage others who encounter children who may be 'hunting' in the woods, to caution them about the rules/law. I also request that those who are responsible for monitoring the woods state the obvious and post 'No Hunting' signs. Most of all, I urge parents who give their children toy guns, please not only teach them how to use the toy safely and but also how to use the gun thoughtfully.

Clarifications

In his March 15, letter Robert Snyder seeks to increase the perceived greenness of the maglev train by parenthetically claiming that it is partially powered by magnets. The magnets do not propel the train at all. They are just chunks of iron or steel with current-carrying wire wrapped around them. The magnets can only propel the train while precisely timed currents surge through these wires.

In the same issue with the pictures of "The Men Who Built a Town," one caption reads, "Plumber cutting a pipe at a brick home, August 1936." He is not cutting the pipe – he is threading the pipe. That new-cut thread will allow him to screw on an elbow or a tee, etc. Another caption reads, "Worker leveling cement floor..." He is not leveling the cement – he is smoothing the cement. Gravity levels the cement just as it levels the top of the coffee or a thicker mix in your cup or bowl.

Congratulations to Aisha McCalla, a senior at Eleanor Roosevelt High School, who was named to the 3A/4A 2017-18 Girls' Basketball All-State First Team by the Maryland Basketball Coaches Association (MBCA). As we reported last week, McCalla led the Lady Raiders to their eighth state title, along with her teammate, senior Nia Scott, who was named to the Third Team.

Also honored by MBCA from ERHS were junior Cameron Brown, Boys Basketball Second Team, and senior Jaden Faulkner, honorable mention.

Congratulations to Alan Elliott for his first place finish in the Middle School 600 and under section of the Maryland Chess Association's Middle School and High School Championship on March 17 in Baltimore. Alan won four games and lost one in the five-round tournament. He is a sixth-grade student at Friends Community School.

Congratulations to ERHS alumnus Ishmail Jabbeie who is part of the University of Maryland Baltimore County basketball team. UMBC was the number 16-seed team in the NCAA basketball tournament and on March 16 they beat University of Virginia the number one seed team. With a score of 74 to 54, the upset was historic.

Congratulations to Nastassja Stephens, a student at Eleanor Roosevelt High School who has been selected to receive the 2018 Horatio Alger State Scholarship. This annual scholarship recognizes outstanding students, who, in the face of great adversity, have exhibited an admirable commitment to continuing their education and serving their communities.

McGrath’s report demonstrated the theater’s success in becoming an economic and cultural driver for Greenbelt, bringing over $330,000 worth of value to Roosevelt Center. Beyond box office and concession sales, the city’s support provides only 20 percent of the theater’s non-taxed revenue which is largely funded by memberships, sponsorships, rentals and other partnerships. The theater now has over 1,200 members, 46 percent of whom live outside Greenbelt.

“If Greenbelt has a certain brand, then the theater is a key element of that brand,” said new FOGT board member Supratik Chaudhuri, a Greenbelter who works in digital services for a leading information technology firm.

Guest speakers who come to lead discussions about certain films are a special draw and are not paid for their time. Of the 32 guest speakers who pulled in visitors in the past year, McGrath explains, “They’re experts in their field who are used to presenting in front of other experts. To be able to tell somebody about your nugget of expertise is really rewarding to these folks. We shower them with thanks and praise and free concessions.”

One challenge McGrath faces is that she holds a contract with the city to run the theater, but institutions tend to prefer longer-term stability when giving grants. To grow an endowment for the theater, FOGT may need to develop much longer contracts with the city than the previous three-year term.

Another challenge is that big box office hits have not been able to cover the theater’s operational bills. Despite a good run of success with films including Hidden Figures, The Post and several weeks of stacked Oscar-nominated films, the percentage that the film industry charges fluctuates wildly, so that even the most successful film may not help the theater meet costs. Even a film as successful as Hidden Figures only netted $350 each day after expenses, but the theater costs $875 daily to operate. The Post, the theater’s most profitable film for the year, netted $548 daily.

Because of this, McGrath focuses on the non-taxed revenue streams to help the nonprofit theater thrive and grow. McGrath’s report notes, “It is important to focus on non-taxable revenue to build a stable financial operation.”

Partnerships with organizations such as Prince George’s County Memorial Library System have been hugely successful in terms of intangibles, such as contributing to quality of life for the community. Friends of Greenbelt Library and Friends of New Carrollton Library work together to help sponsor the free Storytime On Screen series, presented every second and fourth Mondays, featuring a story, a short movie and a craft. This series brings about 150 visitors to the theater twice a month, in service to the nonprofit’s mission of supporting community programming.

Another special partnership is with Greenbelt Elementary School, which is close enough that students can walk to the theater without incurring the expense of renting buses. McGrath explained that the teachers at

Old Greenbelt Theatre

GES were encouraged by their principal to use the theater as a resource: she “brought her teachers down and showed them an inspirational TED talk.

“Then the teachers came to see an environmental documentary, or Hidden Figures, and have an expert talk to them. African American women engineers and scientists were eager to come and talk about their education and what they were interested in when they were fourth graders. One of the kids asked, ‘What was your job at NASA?’ and the speaker answered, ‘You know Kevin Costner? That’s me!’ The light in their eyes! ‘I grew up just like you, and you can do it too.’”

Other special film series include Monday Matinee Classics; Family Series Lineup; Stage on Screen Series; cult film series Stranger Origins; Films for a Better Tomorrow, classic films celebrating the 80th anniversary of the Old Greenbelt Theatre; How to Resist, Then & Now: Cinema & Politics in partnership with The Clarice and Indivisible; and the Tournées Film Festival, bringing French films to American audiences.

Both McGrath and Jones pointed out several ways for patrons to support the theater, including volunteering, donating, becoming a member or renting the space. In September, in time for its 80th anniversary, the theater plans to replace its seats. With the Save Me A Seat campaign, for $500 donors can save two seats, plus receive a tax credit, their names on a plaque and other donor rewards.

understood the problems, but “the RPC zone is not recommended to continue. And it has not been included in the draft. We’ve heard comments from GHI, from the city, from other stakeholders to consider a legacy RPC Zone to continue, but we as a staff have problems with the legacy.”

The problem, he explained, is that the legacy zoning doesn’t do as much as a Neighborhood Conservation Overlay (NCO) Zone would do.

“Your RPC restricts density for new development,” Williams explained. “What a NCO does is control the density and more. It can look at the architecture, it can protect trees or add trees. You can do a lot with NCO.” He was recommending that the city and the county council work together while the zoning rewrite is going through the legislative process. “An NCO could easily be prepared in that 18-month window and be adopted at the same time.”

Williams’ answer satisfied several speakers who stood up to express their concerns that earlier timetables had a gap of several months. With time to create a new overlay that addresses all of Greenbelt, most members of the audience seemed satisfied that there would not be rapid development of high-density living.

Williams said the report includes a response to all the comments made by citizens so that the responders know why their suggestions were accepted or not.

FBI

Turner also discussed the possible FBI relocation, an issue which has gripped Greenbelt and the rest of the county for several years. “It appears that the administration is going in a different direction,” he said, echoing news reports that the General Services Administration (GSA) is currently planning to renovate the current headquarters instead of moving.

He said that the new inspector general of the GSA is reviewing the decision, adding that the new regional director met with county council in early March and said there might be “an opportunity to reverse that decision in the future.” Turner said it wasn’t clear if the FBI was still considering moving or if the GSA was scouting out temporary housing for the agency so the downtown buildings could be rebuilt.

In other news, Turner said the proposed county Fiscal Year 2018 budget was released last week and is available for public viewing on the county council web page princegeorgescountymd.gov/DocumentCenter/View/17960.

City, State Legislation Dominate Mar. 12 Council Meeting Agenda

by Kathleen Gallagher

Although the March 12 meeting of the Greenbelt City Council was otherwise almost entirely taken up with legislation, it opened with a presentation to council by Ingrid Cowan Hass on the pollinator-themed mosaic mural now underway at Greenbelt Elementary School. Hass is both a parent volunteer in the school's arts program and the president of the Greenbelt Association for the Visual Arts (GAVA), in which position she has carried on GAVA-founder Barbara Simon's enthusiasm for the mural. According to Hass, the project, which was featured in a story in last week's issue of this paper, is a joint undertaking of GAVA, the school's PTA and the Board of Education.

At the request of City Manager Nicole Ard, Acting Chief of Police Thomas Kemp followed up on a topic initiated at the February 26 council meeting when he responded to questions from Councilmember Colin Byrd regarding the department's policies and procedures that would apply to deployment of officers in a shooting situation like the one that occurred last month in Florida. Kemp reported that the department had reviewed its policies since the last meeting and confirmed that the city is in compliance with both national and international policy. He emphasized that the department's accreditation requires that they remain current on these and other matters.

In one other non-legislative item, council also agreed to schedule a public hearing on the maglev train proposal on Tuesday, April 3 at 7 p.m. in the Municipal Building.

City Legislation

A resolution to contract with a firm to provide services for a national search to hire a new police chief, which is discussed in a separate article, was adopted. Three other resolutions for negotiated purchase of new equipment or services were on the agenda for first reading and will return for second reading and adoption at the March 26 meeting.

One resolution provides for the purchase of a replacement security camera system from J&M Security Solutions of Clayton, N.C., at a cost of $50,000 with an annual maintenance fee of $30,000. Following a survey of camera needs in the city, Public Works staff and the Public Safety Advisory Committee recommended a system they believe will be more usable than prior systems and will also maintain video longer. Of the several firms interviewed by staff, J&M was judged to be the best match for the city and comes highly recommended by the City of Hyattsville. The proposal includes replacement of both the camera server and camera control software, which will facilitate the storage of police camera video for one year and other camera storage for one month. The Fiscal Year 2018 budget includes $15,000 for cameras, to be supplemented by funds available in the Special Projects account. The city maintenance costs will not incur until next year.

A resolution for purchase of an electronic document management system for the city's Human Resources Department was also introduced. The vendors of the five proposals judged to be best made presentations for review by staff who determined that a Laserfiche Electronic Document System contracted with UnityECM of Poquoson, Va., would best meet the city's needs. This year's budget includes $20,000 for the purchase. Initial costs will be $24,600, with the city IT Department picking up the costs of a cloud server. In addition, subscriptions will run $9,600 per year, which will be included starting with the Fiscal Year 2019 budget. The longer-term plan is to expand the use of this system to other departments, such as Police and Finance, as well as offices under the city manager's office.

The third resolution introduced for first reading was for the purchase of a Utopia Planning Software Upgrade for the Planning Department. Among other improvements, inspectors will be able to use mobile devices to complete inspections, look up past inspections and accomplish other tasks in the field. Currently, inspectors complete paper forms for all their inspections with the information then having to be entered into the existing Utopia software when they return to the office. The time savings and improved data capture will benefit the entire department. The cost of the upgrade is $15,000 from Perconti Software of St. Petersburg, Fla., which develops and maintains Utopia.

Standing Rules

It is difficult to remember that there was a time when council's review of its own Standing Rules following each council election rarely involved more than some fine-tuning of phrasing and tweaking of punctuation. This year, the Standing Rules were discussed at a worksession in December, with resolutions having appeared for first reading on the agendas of the meetings of January 22, February 12, February 26 and March 12. It looked like it might finally happen on March 12, but there were still too many changes and too much disagreement about who gets to put things on the agenda (and how and when) to end with anything more than a plan to bring it back one more time for first reading on March 26.

State Legislation

At the last meeting, council received a request from resident Jeff Harrison to support HB 1461 – the Supporting All Families Everywhere (SAFE) Act. The bill provides that officials of state or local government would be immune from criminal and civil liability for refusing to provide certain information to the federal government or another state in the absence of a warrant. The city's three delegates (Gaines, Healey and Washington) are co-sponsors of the bill, which council voted 6-1 to support, with Councilmember Silke Pope opposing.

A majority of councilmembers were unwilling to support a motion by Councilmember Judith Davis to support Delegate Anne Healey's Bill 766 – Forest Conservation Act, conditional upon inclusion of amendments being developed by the Maryland Municipal League since it was not certain what the amendments would include. Six councilmembers did, however, vote to support the bill with no mention of amendments, with Davis abstaining.

Councilmembers voted unanimously on the remaining two bills. They unanimously opposed SB 1253, which would have directed the city's Program Open Space funding to Prince George's County rather than continuing to send it to the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission for allocation. Councilmembers all supported PG 301/HB 471, which would create exemptions to a requirement for Special Entertainment Permits that cost $1,500 annually. The leadership of the New Deal Café believes that it and similar establishments would be exempt from the fee.

Developers Propose Apartments, Some Commerce by Courthouse

by James Giese

Artist's drawing of the proposed development on Cherrywood Lane.

A new developer is knocking on the city's door asking for permission to come in. The Greenbelt City Council was pleased that the developers knocked first. They also, for the most part, appeared receptive to the concept proposed.

Representatives of the NRP (National Revitalization Partners) Group met with council at its March 5 worksession. They proposed a 328-unit three-to-five story rental apartment project with a small amount of commercial space for an undeveloped 16-acre parcel of land across Cherrywood Lane from Capital Office Park and next to the U.S. District Courthouse. NRP is the potential purchaser of the property, zoned for office buildings and currently owned by Mack-Cali, the owners of Capital Office Park.

Before meeting with council, NRP met with city planning staff in December and the Greenbelt Advisory Planning Board (APB) in January. The proposal is a concept and not cast in stone at this time. NRP is first seeking the advice and opinions of city officials prior to the company acquiring ownership of the land and formally submitting plans for city and county approval.

Proposal

The lot is triangular with its longest side fronting Cherrywood Lane. The courthouse is to its right, as one faces the property from Cherrywood Lane, and closer to Edmonston Road. The site's main entrance would be opposite Ivy Lane with a second entrance to the left closer to the Capital Beltway bridge for Cherrywood Lane.

The developer's presentations showed three different plans with slight variations. All included two five-story L-shaped main buildings. Some 36 garage units would be built adjacent to the parking lots. A proposal to include five four-unit free-standing carriage houses, with each two-story dwelling being on top of a garage, piqued the interest of councilmembers.

A small amount of commercial space is proposed at the corners of the two main buildings which could house retail establishments. At the rear corner of the property will be a clubhouse community building offering access to an outdoor pool, a fitness center and probably the rental office. Other amenities being considered are walking paths, a tot-lot playground, picnic tables and a dog park.

Questions

Noting that NRP claims to be the top-ranked developer of affordable housing in the country, Mayor Emmett Jordan asked what determines if housing is affordable and whether such housing was being considered here. NRP spokesperson Josh Wooldridge said that affordable housing was eligible to receive government low-income tax credits; this project was contemplated to be market rate.

team as Youth Step USA champions.

“It felt amazing not only winning but being able to share the victory with our sisters because they can attest to all the commitment that comes from being a part of the team,” ERHS senior and DRB co-captain Marqui Williams says.

The Lady Raiders Step Squad was formed in 1997. The squad also has a coach rather familiar with the ERHS stepping tradition. Jonelle Agurs was a member and co-captain of The Lady Raiders Step Squad during her time at ERHS before taking on the role as coach in 2010 while studying at the University of Maryland.

Agurs says her role as one of five team leaders has evolved over these eight years, as she has transitioned from coaching and taking charge of all details to turning responsibility and leadership back to the team. “I’m just giving them the tools to really put on a show,” Agurs says. The team is the driving factor in deciding choreography, routines and stage formations, which Agurs says leads to deeper team investment by its members.

Both squads work to uphold traditions of success in step competitions along with their teams’ missions. DRB members commit to brotherhood, scholarship, community service and creating exciting shows to learn and perform for audiences. The Lady Raiders commit to working hard in something that is fierce and perhaps “not so cute,” as Agurs observed, while practicing and competing. Agurs said the team likes to incorporate stepping, dancing and spoken word into a complete show that has a true storyline from beginning to end to enhance the audience experience.

This season both teams have competed and performed in shows including performances at Strathmore in Bethesda with Step Afrika! Also, DRB participated in events at the Kennedy Center, the Howard University Homecoming Step Show and on a trip to Los Angeles. The lead-up to the national competition in May for both teams features more practices, workouts, local competitions and community performances, including one that the teams will host on March 24 with a Game of Thrones theme, appropriately titled Game of Step. This competition will bring together teams from Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, Florida and Texas.

Both coaches have high hopes for their teams as they continue to prepare for national competition. The teams work tirelessly and continue to make sacrifices in the name of their teams. Agurs cites the tremendous growth that her team has shown so far as a positive signal for the rest of the season, while DRB coach Melvern affirms that it is “this drive and determination that truly keeps our team on top.”

City Recreation Department Launches Brand New Look

After an extensive survey and marketing study, Greenbelt Recreation is ready to present a brand new look that will emphasize the department’s commitment to the needs of the Greenbelt community. A launch party of the new brand and logo will be part of this year’s Annual Egg Hunt on Saturday, March 31 at Buddy Attick Park from 10 a.m. to noon. There will be more information about the new look, new program discounts and giveaways, and an opportunity to provide feedback on the new logo.

A 2017 marketing study showed that residents are overwhelmingly happy with the offerings and programs of the Recreation Department: over 90 percent of the survey participants would recommend them to others. What is needed is consistency in the message and more efforts to promote programs. The new logo complements the existing city brand while providing a unique identity to Greenbelt Recreation. Along with the department’s new tagline – Fun, Fitness, and Friendship – the new logo depicts the department’s commitment to provide diverse programming and facilities to meet the needs of the community.

Each of the icons on the logo has a special meaning that represents the goals and vision of Greenbelt Recreation. The first icon represents the city flag and the array of outdoor activities available to the community. Residents can enjoy skateboarding at the skate park, a leisurely walk around the lake, a fun seasonal family event outdoors and everything in between. The second icon represents the diversity of arts programming offered by the department and the many opportunities participants have to express their creativity through visual, ceramic and performing arts programs. The last icon represents Greenbelt’s rich history of providing athletics and swim programs. Greenbelt had the first municipal swimming pool in the Washington, D.C., area.

“We are so excited to present our new brand to the community,” stated Greenbelt Recreation Director Julie McHale.

New Gas Station, Store May Come To Greenbelt Road

by Jill Connor

Greenbelt City Council, during a worksession on Wednesday, March 7 had mixed reactions to a plan by developers proposing to possibly put a gas station and convenience store on a site off Greenbelt Road near the Capitol Cadillac dealership.

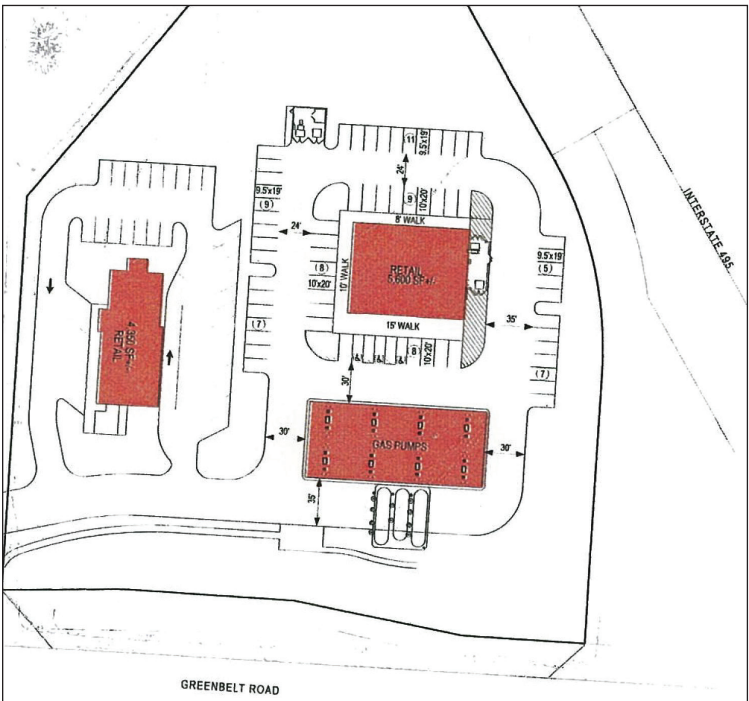

The developers, Patrick Ricker, Donna Wilson and Kirk Wine-land, said they were approached by representatives of Wawa hoping to expand to this area. The representatives told Ricker they had identified a few sites in the county and asked if he could check on their availability. The Capitol Cadillac location was one of the potential sites presented to them and became “one of their top two sites” according to Ricker. “Royal Farms has now also expressed an interest,” continued Ricker. The property is owned by Capitol Cadillac and is currently under contract, said Ricker.

The proposed site plans brought to council for the 4.4-acre lot included two pads for small commercial buildings and an area for eight gas pumps. One of the buildings would likely be a Royal Farms or Wawa convenience store. The other would be a second retail location, possibly a bank depending on what company they could contract with. There is also a plan for infrastructure to improve access to and protect a small historical site on the premises.

Council appreciated that the developers came to them looking for support first although it was not required at this time. Prince George’s County Council is the governmental body that would approve site plans and rezone the location. The location is currently zoned for commercial office. The developers would need a text amendment to change it to commercial miscellaneous.

Another Gas Station?

Several councilmembers questioned the proposal. Councilmember Judith Davis said, “I am concerned. Do we need another gas station? Do we need another bank? We have a lot of gas stations. We have a lot of banks.” Councilmember Edward Putens added, “I’m sorry I just don’t see a need for another gas station. I really don’t.” Ricker’s response was that Wawa is very interested in the site. Ricker listed the closest stations on Greenbelt Road as the Shell in Berwyn Heights at 6327 Greenbelt Road and another Shell station at 8711 Greenbelt Road near Glenn Dale. There is an Exxon station at 7619 Greenbelt Road, Davis pointed out. Councilmember Rodney Roberts mentioned the BP at 20 Southway Road, which is less than a mile from the proposed location.

Initial Proposed site plan for gas station and convenience store on Greenbelt Road presented to city council on March 7.

There were many comments about the utility of a convenience store in that location, especially with its proximity to Greenbelt Park and the offices on Walker Drive. “If you have a Royal Farms it will be generating traffic from the hotels,” said Terri Hruby, acting director of planning and community development, with agreement from some council members.

Hruby and Brian Gibbons, chair of the Advisory Planning Board (APB), also expressed concerns about lighting, signage, frontage appearance and green building techniques. Hruby suggested a covenant attached to any rezoning by the county so that council could have an impact on these decisions.

Next Steps

The developers will present a revised plan to the APB and then come back to council with APB’s report on the revised plan. Council members requested that the developers consider building only one building and the gas pumps structure but removing the second pad to leave as open space. Councilmember Silke Pope said, “I like Royal Farms and I don’t think it is a bad idea. I just don’t know if I am 100 percent there.”

Community Foundation Expands Funding Focus

by Carol Shaw

The door is noticeably wider this spring for community organizations interested in applying for a grant from Greenbelt Community Foundation (GCF) to fund their activities.

Groups with existing programs are now eligible to apply, provided they meet the foundation’s criteria. Previously, GCF grants were limited to organizations starting new projects, but the foundation board recently decided to expand eligibility to ensure it serves all organizations, particularly small organizations that may not have the capacity to start a new program.

GCF now allows organizations to apply for funding to enhance their current programs or services or to secure funding as a bridge from one funding source to another. GCF will continue to provide one-year grant awards because its role is to support organizations as one of their funding sources, not to become the main or ongoing funder.

The GCF grants can range from $500 to $5,000 and the upcoming application deadline is midnight April 15. A week before that, on Sunday, April 8, there will be a free application tutoring session at 3 p.m. at the Greenbelt Police Station to help organizations improve their grant applications. Organizations should bring a completed application for review. These volunteers can give recommendations, but this in no way ensures funding.

The foundation is interested in funding programs and services that enhance the cultural, artistic, recreational, social or environmental vitality of Greenbelt, and that impact residents in all parts of the city.

To be eligible for funding, organizations should have IRS tax exempt status [501(c)(3)] or find a qualifying organization to act as its fiscal agent. This agent must be a 501(c)(3) organization, willing to act as a financial sponsor and have a similar mission. Organizations eligible include nonprofits, cooperatives, religious groups, schools and associations.

Often a good community program is not funded due to a poorly written grant application. All areas of the application require proficiency and clarity. The criteria GCF uses to determine whether to support a program are value to Greenbelt, clarity of plan, feasibility of approach, qualifications of service providers and administrators, likelihood of success, appropriateness for GCF support and sustainability.

Register for this workshop by Friday, March 30 by emailing the name of the person attending, his or her contact info and the name of the organization to info@greenbeltfoundation.net.

For more information about the workshop, application process and to get an application, go to greenbeltfoundation.net.

Prepare for the GHI Election

by Alex Barnes and Tom Jones

Is it too early to think about the upcoming election? Not for a member of GHI which holds an election every year in May. This year’s annual meeting is Thursday, May 10 and the election continues Friday May 11.

To help GHI members choose among the candidates, GHI’s Nominations and Election (N&E) Committee will host a candidates’ forum on Tuesday, April 17, in the City Council chambers which will also be broadcast live on the city website and the Verizon and Comcast Greenbelt channels. This year’s forum is three weeks before the election so GHI members have more time to consider the candidates and discuss with neighbors.

Not satisfied with the choices? The deadline for candidates to file is 12 days after the debate so potential candidates still have time to decide to throw their hat into the ring. Maybe you want to run?

Set a good example for kids or grandkids or neighbors’ kids and start now to find someone to represent you on one of GHI’s elected bodies: Board of Directors, Audit Committee and N&E Committee. Think of who can make GHI better. Recruit them to run or recommend them to the N&E Committee. Happy with how GHI is functioning? Then encourage current Board, Audit and N&E Committee members to run again.

More information is at ghi.coop/content/ghi-elections or contact N&E Chair Tom Jones at 301-474-6001.

Old Nursing Home Property May Feature Glass Walls, Hot Tubs

by Jill Connor

The representatives of a developer proposing to build at the site of the former nursing home off Greenbelt Road received a more supportive response to their new plans from city council on Wednesday, March 7 than at their previous meeting. Between 2007 and 2009, Greenbelt Armory Place LLC began the process for developing the property off Greenbelt Road, the former location of a nursing home. The proposal includes a detailed site plan of a multi-family 90-unit structure approved by the county as well as a text amendment to the zoning code. The covenant put on the property involved a number of stipulations including approval by the city of a variety of aspects of the building process. The building was not built earlier because of the financial recession, said company representatives. “Now that we have come out of the recession,” said Tom Haller, an attorney with Gibbs and Haller representing Greenbelt Armory Place LLC, “we wanted to take a fresh look at the property. We wanted to come up with something that was economically feasible and something that the city would support.”

This is the second worksession in which company representatives explained a proposal for developing the site they had purchased in 2004. At the first meeting on December 6, 2017, the company representatives came to council with a more traditional town-home-style project but council was not supportive of the idea. “We came and presented that to you and you were very clear with your direction to us. You actually thought we had it right the first time,” said Haller. “You thought the multi-family option made sense and that an elevator-serviced product would not only be attractive to existing residents wanting to downsize but stay in the city but also to people coming into the city. Maybe we were offering a product not available already.”

New Plans

The plans presented at the March meeting were for three buildings housing 40 to 50 two-bedroom units, each estimated to be between 1,200 to 1,400 square feet. The proposed design of the upper floors would have units with glass outer walls and private terraces facing Greenbelt Road and possibly University Square. The proposed layout also includes courtyards with hot tubs, a restaurant-style community room and private storage lockers for deliveries. The proposed buildings feature six floors with the ground floor of tandem parking spaces for residents and some visitor parking.

Parking and Zoning

The proposed parking would offer one lane parking that can fit two cars, one in front of another, underneath the building with retaining walls. The architect Ian Black said, “The parking ratio is 1.9 spaces per unit, which counts the tandem as two spaces. The zoning code is written in such a way that the tandem or the second space doesn’t really count toward the parking requirement.”

This design is above the currently-zoned density. “The main issue is density, the property was originally zoned R-18, which is where the original 90-units figure came from,” said Haller. “So what we would be asking of you tonight is to listen to the proposal and continue to give us feedback on it if you think we are going in the right direction. What we would like to do is to work with your staff to write up a text amendment.” That text amendment and a detailed site plan would need to be approved by the Prince George’s County Council.

Costs

Though the market prices were not detailed, Mike Postal, representative of Greenbelt Armory Place LLC, said “We believe we can sell these for about $300 a square foot. The market was telling us we couldn’t get over $425,000 per unit.” Considering the proposed sizes, that

Wooldridge noted the site’s walkability aspect with its close proximity to retail space and public transportation, the Greenbelt Metro Station. He also said NRP was considering providing a bike-share program.

Councilmember Judith Davis suggested the developers consider providing a child day care facility. This opened the door for Councilmember Leta Mach to advise that there is a cooperative group interested in setting up a child day care facility in this area.

Jordan suggested the architecture be compatible to the adjacent buildings or mimic original Greenbelt building designs.

Dissent

Councilmember Rodney Roberts asked why the city should give up valuable commercial property for more rental apartments when there are already some 3,000 units just across the Beltway. He noted that apartments would be a greater burden on the city, county and school system’s financial ability to provide services. Also, he felt the design concept proposed was not new and was “going up” elsewhere. He asked if the project would be “stick” construction (wood framing and support) and when told it would, he called it “cheap construction” that would not be permitted in Montgomery County. If the buildings were more than five stories high, a masonry construction would be required, he said, and that would be much better.

Wooldridge called his comments “unfair.” He said it would not be cheap construction. Also, NRP is doing similar construction in Montgomery County.

Councilmember Silke Pope said she liked the plan and the comments made by the Advisory Planning Board in its report to council. She urged the developers to check with the county school system as to where children from the development would attend school, noting the problem the city was having in getting children from the South Core of Greenbelt Station to attend schools within the city. Davis asked NRP to be sure they would have the 20770 Greenbelt zip code.

Councilmember Edward Putens said he was still uncertain how he felt about the proposal. He noted that it was not really a mixed-use proposal as sought by council and that a large part of the site was devoted to parking.

He pointed out a need to provide for the pullover of buses at stops.

Davis asked about the proposed carriage houses. Matthew Tedesco, the attorney representing NRP, said that was a new concept for this county. Wooldridge said each unit would have a ground-floor garage and would have both an outside and a garage entrance to the home. The units could be studio, one bedroom, one bedroom with den or even three-bedroom rental units.

Davis suggested clustering the carriage houses instead of spreading them about the project. She also said she liked having a dog park and picnic tables and urged constructing a safe pedestrian pathway around the pond. Wooldridge also told her that there would be an electric charging station for automobiles near the clubhouse.

High Rents

Councilmember Colin Byrd asked if this construction would withstand “the big, bad wolf.” NRP representative Joseph Torres responded that the project was aimed toward “the highest rent levels” and would need to be quality construction. “It will be here for 50 years,” he said. He noted his company does not defer maintenance and the property would be “kept up.”

Jordan asked how storm water would be captured and whether the project would be LEED certified (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design). Wooldridge responded that it had the potential to be and that NRP had sought certification elsewhere. All appliances would be energy star certified.

Jordan noted there would be garages separated from the apartments. Wooldridge responded that 42 were proposed. Some residents would like to have one, either for their car or for storage, he said.

Mach asked if amenities were planned to help people work in place. Wooldridge responded that there would be work spaces planned. He also noted that people liked to get out of the house, which is why a retail establishment such as a coffee shop in the commercial area and other amenities would be desirable.

Staff Comments

City Planner Terri Hruby told council that staff was opposed to any townhouse development, believing such development was unneeded in the city. She said the NRP proposal would complement the office park and be a catalyst to increasing its occupancy. She was pleased with NRP’s work at other locations and that it had selected Greenbelt for its first county project and that the city would be working with it from the project start.

Map of proposed development on Cherrywood Lane

Roberts asked Hruby what the percentage of rental apartments was in the city. She said the exact figure would be in the forthcoming city budget document and that it was more than 50 percent.

Jordan noted a proposal had been made for a high-rise apartment at a site council felt was unsuitable and asked if a high-rise building had been considered for this property. Wooldridge said NRP believed its proposal was a better use.

Davis said she opposed building more offices but said there may be a need for medical offices. She thought NRP should consider a wide variety of retail needs, such as a cleaners.

Davis noted talk of expanding the courthouse and wondered if there is a need for this land for that. Jordan and Putens said adjacent Beltsville Agricultural Research Center property was allocated for a possible expansion.

Marc “Kap” Kapistan, representing the Beltway Plaza shopping center, told council he was excited by the project, even though he was unfamiliar with the developers. He urged council to go forward with it.

Schedule

Tedesco said he felt there had been positive feedback from council. NRP needed now to determine whether to proceed and do further planning. Site plan review would take a couple of months. He thought the company might be back to the city by June at the earliest.

Hruby told council that the proposal might require the passage of some legislation. Since Class 18-01 will begin on Tuesday, April 3 and continue each Tuesday through May 29 from 7 to 9 p.m. This free nine-week program is an opportunity for those who live, work or attend school in Greenbelt to gain a better understanding of how a law enforcement agency works. It consists of both classroom and hands-on instruction covering a wide variety of police functions.

Classes will be held at the Greenbelt Police Station, 550 Crescent Road. The number of attendees is limited to 12. More information, including criteria for selection, can be obtained at gpd-citizensacademy.com or by calling George Mathews, public information liaison, at 240-542-2116.

Garden Club to Meet Wednesday, March 28
The Beltsville Garden Club will meet on Wednesday, March 28 at 7:30 p.m. in the Multipurpose Room of the Duckworth School, 11201 Evans Trail, Beltsville. Dr. Richard Olsen, director of the U.S. National Arboretum, will present Perennially Yours: Herbaceous Perennials Need Love Too. Olsen, a Greenbelter who admits his first love is woody perennials, shows some love for herbaceous perennials too. He will highlight perennials observed in his travels to foreign lands as well as ones worth experimenting with in Maryland gardens.
A recognized international leader in the public garden arena, Olsen has the distinction of being the last Ph.D. student of the famed horticulturist J.C. Raulston at North Carolina State University.

The public is welcome and admission is free. Attendees are invited to bring a plant, cutting, garden tool or magazine to exchange. Refreshments will be served after the talk.

Drivers Needed For Cancer Patients
For many cancer patients, getting to and from treatment is one of their toughest challenges. The American Cancer Society needs volunteer drivers in Greenbelt to help provide transportation for cancer patients in the community who are receiving treatment at various cancer treatment facilities.
Last year, Road to Recovery provided more than 340,000 rides to and from treatment, but there is a greater need for more drivers in every community. Schedules are flexible.
Having cancer is hard. Getting to treatment shouldn't be.
To volunteer, call 1-800-227-2345 or go to cancer.org/drive.

Final Decision on Turning Point Academy under Study

by Matthew Arbach

On April 24, the Prince George's County Board of Education will make its final decision concerning the possible closure of Turning Point Academy (TPA) in Lanham. Based on the most recent performance review, the charter school has not fulfilled the requirements of its charter agreement in the areas of board governance, student academic performance and facility conditions.
Since June 30, 2017, when the three-year charter agreement term expired, the school has been existing under an agreement that ran from the 2017-2018 academic year as the review of the renewal application was under scrutiny. If the shutdown goes through, the plan is for TPA to be placed under the aegis of the Prince George's County Public Schools (PGCPS) during the 2018-2019 academic year with a final closure on June 30, 2019. This is the 11th year for TPA.
The performance review determined the level of board governance in the Not Met category due to its inability to be effective in its administrative duties and its self-assessment and self-improvement procedures.
In 2015 to 2017, TPA generally scored below the average trends for both PGCPS and the State of Maryland in PARCC Math and PARCC ELA (Partnership for Assessment of Readiness for College and Careers English Language Arts) for grades 3 to 8. The deviation was in PARCC ELA where TPA 8th graders scored highest. This places TPA in the Approaching category which indicates a majority but not complete achievement level, requiring further development.

The review indicated the following concerns about the state of the facilities at TPA: student safety levels of the 14 temporary buildings now in use; operational issues deriving from the shared space with the community church; tight conditions in the main facility's classrooms, as well as narrow hallways and unsafe wall construction; and insufficient protection from weather.
Said Loretta White Khaalid, charter school liaison, "closing schools is painful for students, staff, parents and community members and we deeply regret any disruption this may cause to your family."
TPA has offered students the following options for closure: enrollment in the neighborhood boundary school lottery for charter/specialty programs or special transfer to another school beyond the neighborhood area.

would translate to units between $360,000 to $420,000.

Council Opinions

Councilmember Judith Davis said she liked the idea. “It’s going to be very striking.” Davis also expressed concern about the affordability of the units. “I want it to be affordable to people who are downsizing. When you add this extra stuff it means that it’s not going to be affordable to our Greenbelt folks that want to downsize and I’m gonna have a problem with that.” She also has concerns with the sound from Greenbelt Road.

Councilmember Emmett Jordan said the design was attractive and reminded him of Frank Lloyd Wright.

One topic brought up by Councilmember Rodney Roberts was about the building material and the quality of the structure saying, “I think you should build it out of concrete.” Councilmember Edward Putens expressed his concerns about security as well as the building materials. Postal said when pushed by council, “As much as I would like to build it out of concrete we just might not be able to afford it.”

The next step for Greenbelt Armory Place LLC will be a full presentation to Greenbelt’s Advisory Planning Board which will give a recommendation to council. The Prince George’s County Council will have to approve a new text amendment and detailed site plans.

piggy-backing on an agreement used by the other two cities.

Since the proposed start date for the work was March 19, city council introduced the resolution for negotiated purchase of services for first and second reading, as well as adoption, at the March 12 meeting. Ordinarily, resolutions must be read at two separate meetings before they can be adopted. The city council’s Standing Rules require an affirmative vote from at least six of the seven members to introduce and adopt a resolution on one night. The council unanimously supported the staff recommendation to contract with Springsted Waters at a cost of $24,000.

The entire hiring process is expected to take about four months and will resemble the search that took place for the city manager position. The draft agreement outlines the recruitment process, including development of a candidate profile, advertisement and outreach to potential candidates, application screening and support in negotiating with a final candidate.

City Manager Nicole Ard said people sometimes think of a national search as being directed toward external candidates only, but that she wanted to assure everyone that this search will be inclusive of both internal and external candidates.

Development of the candidate profile will include ideas from the city council and employees, as well as comments from residents through, for example, the recent community meet-and-greets held by the city manager, advisory group meetings and surveys. It is hoped that opportunities to meet with the finalists can be scheduled with police department employees and the public included, subject to candidate confidentiality needs.

Ard also announced that a survey and place for comment is still available online and encouraged residents to make use of it (surveymonkey.com/r/JCNZLYM).

Free Egg Decorating Workshop Offered

A free Easter egg decorating workshop will be held on Saturday, March 24 from 2 to 4 p.m. at the Brentwood Arts Exchange. Come for glitter, eggs and fun at this family-friendly event. Create beautifully decorated eggs that will impress friends and even the Easter Bunny. Children will receive their first two eggs for free; additional eggs will be available for purchase.

Cub Scout Pack 202 Holds Annual Pinewood Derby

by Natalie Bailey

Cub Scout Pack 202 held the Pinewood Derby on Sunday, March 11 at Elks Lodge 1778 on Kenilworth Avenue. In the Pinewood Derby, scouts race cars made from a standard kit of a block of wood, nails and wheels. They can shape and decorate their cars however they like, but the cars must weigh in at under 5 ounces and meet certain size requirements.

The pack held competitions for each den, for the overall pack, and for friends and family. Design competitions were held as well.

Chartered by Greenbelt Community Church, Cub Scout Pack 202 is the oldest continually running pack in Prince George’s County.

Tiger Den Leader Clark Rushing checks in cars and makes sure that they are within the size and weight allowed.

Scouts and families look on as Wolf Scout parent Jim Heagy collects cars from the finish line to determine the heat's winner.

100th Birthday Celebration

Friday Bridge players pose with Anne Lemaire, who celebrated her 100th birthday this week. They had cake and sang to her several times. Lemaire swims at the Aquatic & Fitness Center twice a week. She claims she is just as happy as she was when she moved to the U.S. from Europe in 1950. She was excited to tell Community Center staff that she taught nursery school for about 7 years in Greenbelt, starting in 1958.
